Transgender Based Revolution Must Come

By SchizoTitsWeekly

Chapter 1 : INTRO ; The obvious and should be self explanatory.

Let me put you into a perspective real quick, imagine you get home early from work, your husband is still at his job, your daughter is at choir practice, and to your knowledge your 16 year old son is at home due to feeling sick. You walk into your baby boy's room to check up on him and see how he's doing. When you slowly open the door, you see a young boy who's shirt is covered in both blood and vomit, holding an empty bottle of pills in his right hand. Your boy had just killed himself, no note, no voice recording, nothing. As time passes by and the world moves on, the funeral passes, and your husband and daughter go back to their daily routine, you finally decide to clean your son's room. You do this because you not only need to let go but you're also hoping to maybe find something, anything that can maybe explain why he did what he did, why he took his own life. As time begins to pass and you keep cleaning, you find something under his bed you never thought you'd find. It's not a suicide note, a rejected love letter, a failed test, no, it's nothing like that. What you find is a cheap amazon-brand, made in China, pair of thigh highs and a cheap skirt. What would your first thought be? Would you blame transgenderism for your son's suicide, or would you blame yourself for whatever you said or did that made your child feel unsafe to share their feelings with you? If you want my honest answer, neither of these are the right responses. Unless you as a parent directly went out of your way to physically and mentally harm your child, I wouldn't say putting too much blame on yourself is healthy.

You were misguided and dumb, naive. You said the wrong things at the wrong moment. But, when compared to the first option which is to blame transgender ideology, it's a much better choice to just feel guilty for your own actions. Transgender ideology doesn't kill, it never has and it never will. Your child killed themself because of your bigoted comments, and their gender dysphoria. None of those are a part of transgender ideology. Bigotry is the horrid ways of the Ku Klux Klan and the Nazi party, and sadly in the past 20 years their ideology and systems of belief have leaked into the public consciousness. In 2016 when Donald Trump was elected, his presence brought back to life the already buried beliefs of the KKK, and allowed these zombie husks of human beings to spread their genes, their ideals, their ways. Most likely, you, a friend, family member, or acquaintance have said something inherently bigoted without even knowing. Before we dive deep into how to fix or heal society's view of transgenderism and the people who have spread an anti-transgender rhetoric, we first for clarity must understand what being transgender is, the misinformation regarding it, and some of its history. Oxford Learner's Dictionaries defines transgender as "describing or relating to people whose gender identity does not match the sex they were said to have at birth." That's purely it, if you do not believe or feel that you are truly the sex of which you were born as, you are transgender. You can be any kind of trans, being trans doesn't just boil down to "I wanna be a girl" and "I wanna be a boy", it's both as simple as that and more complicated. The concept of Gender Dysphoria was coined by the psychiatrist Norman M. Fisk in the early 1970s. Gender Dysphoria is a very real albeit flimsy mental disorder that has very few "cures". Only one of these "cures" is healthy, that being transitioning. The rest fall under the category of Conversion therapy which is abusive, barbaric, cruel, and inherently evil. The words "Conversion therapy" are enough to make any LGBTQ child fearful. Conversion therapy must be banned worldwide for LGBTQ children to be safe, but that is a topic best discussed later. What is transitioning? Transitioning is usually divided into 3 parts, socially transitioning, medically transitioning, and legally transitioning. Socially transitioning is as simple as a trans person telling someone they are trans, telling them their new name, and dressing the part. In all honesty, all 3 of those things are optional. Medically transitioning is split into 3 parts as well, sometimes 2. First, a trans person might need to get diagnosed with gender dysphoria, this isn't necessary in all states but it is many. After this, a transgender person would start HRT, also known as Hormone Replacement Therapy.

Rightwing grifters have tarnished the public image of HRT by informing those either ignorant or uninformed that HRT is an irreversible surgery that the state is allowing doctors to perform on kids. Here is the actual truth. HRT is quite literally just medicine. All of it is either an injection, pill, patch, or gel. All HRT is medicine used to change or alter hormones, and it is entirely reversible. Surgeries on the other hand, are usually not. Those are permanent, but conservatives love to leave out important bits of information. First off all, none of these surgeries are being done on children. Most kids don't even have access to hormone replacement therapy up until age 16, at most they'll receive puberty blockers. To get either top or bottom surgery, you must be on HRT for AT LEAST 12 months in a row. That gives transgender children usually 18 years to consider going on HRT, then an extra year to even consider getting bottom or top surgery. Also, I'd like to bring this up here because I don't think I'll have another opportunity to, but if GRS (Gender Reassignment Surgery) is banned, that also means it'll be harder for cis women to access BRS (Breast Reduction Surgery). That is obviously a problem for multiple reasons.

In the current year (2024), transgender visibility is high, the presence of transgender people is very well known. On the other hand, since 2020 transgender acceptance has been on a downward slope. Don't get me wrong, transgender people have always struggled with acceptance and they more likely always will. But since the 2020 election transgender acceptance has plummeted. Where trans people were once accepted, they were now shunned. The bigotry of transphobes such as author J.K. Rowling and the organization Gay's Against Groomers has only gotten larger and louder. Their influence spreads far and wide now. These bigots go out of their way to try and convince you that transgender women are men trying to rape women, and that transgender men are nothing more then tomboys who have been groomed into changing their sex. It's truly a moronic belief system that is fueled by nothing more than spite, hate, and self projection. The bigotry has gotten so bad that on websites such as Twitter, both Nazis and pedophiles agree that “transgenderism” is what's really wrong with society.

The website worldpopulationreview.com reports that in 2021, countries with gender neutral bathrooms had 2,658 cases of rape reported, while that same year the USA, had over 140,776 reported casses. Only 27 out of 50 states in the USA have laws requiring most if not all bathrooms to be unisex. That is only 54% of the state. In 2023, sites such as www.statista.com provided statistics of what states had the highest reports of rape by every 100,000 inhabitants. This is not a definite number, but just a sample. The top 6 states were; Alaska at 111.84, Arkansas at 72.3, Michigan at 58.9, Colorado at 58.7, Oklahoma at 58.6, and Montana at 54.4. All of those states but Colorado and Michigan are red states known for their strict gender roles and expectations. Alaska has few unisex bathrooms, Arkansas has very few unisex bathrooms, Colorado does have many unisex bathrooms, Oklahoma has bills dedicated to keeping transgender people out of bathrooms, and so does Montana. Michigan is interesting, the state is open to allowing transgender people to use their bathroom of choice, but if you get reported by someone who thinks you don’t look like your preferred gender enough, you will be charged with disturbing the peace. That will lead to either a fine upwards of 250 dollars, community service, or 3 months behind bars. In 2015, over 24,661 cases of rape were reported from prisons and jails across the country. It’s very clear that sexual abuse within bathrooms is not specificaly caused by one’s gender or sexual orinatation, most of it is caused by gender-divded communities in which men and women are pinned against one another, usually being communities where men are taught to be strong, assertive, and in charge. If a man born into one of these communities wanted to enter the bathrooms of women and AFAB people to rape them, they would just do it. They wouldn’t need to dress up in drag to do it.

It is evident that Transgender people are not a threat within women's restrooms, quite the opposite in fact. The website rainn.org reported that transgender people are more likely to face sexual assault then cis men and women. 21% of transgender college students reported that they had been sexually assaulted, 18% of cis women reported sexual assault, and only 4% of cis men reported being sexually assaulted. People such as Chaya Raichik, J.K. Rowling, Matt Walsh, and Ben Shaprio try to claim that transgender adults are out for your kids, and they wish to use the women's bathroom as a way to sexually abuse them. It's ironic considering how racist, abusive, and predatory the prosecutor's I just named are. J.K. Rowling has written many racist pieces that support slavery, Chaya Raichik has openly supported child abuse, Matt Walsh has disscussed how the age of consent needs to be lowered permanently due to "breedability", and Ben Shapiro is a well known hypocrite who wishes to keep poor people poor, and rich men rich. He's also a misogynist who controls how he and his debates are viewed. He'd rather sit around all day arguing with freshmen in college then have an actual debate with someone who has graduated. But, that is a whole can of worms on its own. The point is, the ones who claim that the innocent transgender people minding their own business are out for your kids, are actually the real predators. Specifically Matt Walsh though, let's talk about him really quick.

"We are not gonna rest until every child is protected, until trans ideology is entirely erased from the earth. That's what we're fighting for, and we will not stop until we achieve it."

- Matt Walsh, SCOTUS Rally, 2024.

Matt Walsh is well known for his inappropriate beliefs regarding minors, but to be specific on August 24th, 2018, Matt Walsh uploaded a video called "We Need To Reclaim Sexual Morality | The Matt Walsh Show Ep. 90". In this video, Matt tries to convince the viewer that "consent is a social construct", which doesn't make any damn sense, especially when you take into account his belief regarding transgenderism. Matt being Matt, genuinely believes that transgenderism is a cult and that it is used to groom our children into being weird sex perverts. When the Supreme Court agreed to uphold the Tennessee law banning transgender teens from accessing gender-affirming care, AKA HRT, Matt Walsh made an appearance where he said word for word, “We are not gonna rest until every child is protected, until trans ideology is entirely erased from the Earth. That’s what we’re fighting for, and we will not stop until we achieve it.” The man who believes that the age of consent is a social construct said this. Conservatives don’t care about your kids and they never will, all they care about is filling their own pockets and spreading their Nazi gene across the country, and eventually across the whole world. This is not just a fight for queer people to exist, this is a fight for class equality as well. Many conservatives have a nasty tendency to call every single person they disagree with a filthy commie, and while they’re usually wrong 99% of the time, when it comes to transgender people they’re probably right. Why are they right though? Why is it that so many transgender people align themselves more with socialist and communist beliefs, rather than capitalist beliefs? After all, transgender people are usually the ones to speak up and against oppression, and the 2 most well known communists and socialists were Stallin and Hitler. Well, it can be boiled down to 2 reasons. One, Hitler and Stalin might have both had communist and socialist beliefs and economic policies but they were not the inventors of it. Karl Marx was. Hitler and Stalin were just the tiny brained, moronic apes who chose to brand their fascism as such. Their dictatorships quite literally went against many of the things Marx had said. The fact we live in the 2020’s yet these beliefs are still associated with those two is quite silly and incredibly tragic. Especially when socialist and communist beliefs are the only reason we have public schools, welfare, and why churches aren’t taxed. All things that go against capitalism. The second reason and more prominent one is that capitalism is quite literally one of the worst enemies of transgender people’s existence. Let me get the obvious out of the way first. Transitioning costs MONEY. LOTS OF MONEY. Male to female bottom surgery can cost up to 25,000 dollars. FTM bottom surgery can cost up to 24,900 dollars. That is not chump change, that is a damn pretty penny that most people will never see in their entire life. They might see it for about a week or two, but then it’ll be gone. Even buying the HRT medicine can be costly. It isn't the most expensive medicine in the world, but the amount of money you'll be spending on blood tests, needles, shipping, and the meds itself will pile up quickly. So you better pray that your insurance covers it, because if not you're in major trouble.

You might be asking if insurance will cover the surgeries? Well, it depends on the company, state, and your plan. Even if it does get approved though, you'll be waiting a long time. You better hope nothing goes wrong during the paperwork stage, because you'll be right back at square zero! Skye Kychenthal wrote a paper and published it to arxiv.org about how StackOverflow's annual developer survey indicated that 1.92% of their US developers identify as transgender, and another 1.42% identify as non-binary or gender nonconforming. Those are some big numbers and some high paying jobs! Despite that though, Forbes.com reported that cisgender people are paid 32% more than transgender people. That is an insane number, showing that despite how much the skills of transgender people are needed, they are paid as if they don't deserve the right to eat. It's clear that in a capitalistic system such as The United States, transgender people are not valued the same as cisgendered people. That goes into my next point, transgender isolationism. When a transgender person is outcasted by their family, their friends, their job, their "overall" community, they lose access to financial stability. Not to mention, a good majority of transgender people are born into lower class households. "Almost three in ten transgender adults (29%), as well as almost three in ten cisgender bisexual women (29%), are living in poverty", reports hrc.org. All of this makes communism and socialism desirable to transgender people. Its strong beliefs in communal effort and sharing of wealth from the rich make it desirable for good reason. When you take away someone's home, but then their financial ability to live, they're going to look for a community that believes in sharing wealth to help one another survive. Conservatives love to call all transgender people communists despite the fact it is the fault of conservative beliefs. Forbes reported that at least 350 transgender people were murdered in 2024. This might sound like a small number, until you consider the fact that thousands of transgender people are killed without ever being documented, thousands of transgender people have their deaths covered up, and thousands of transgender people die and their killers get away with no punishment.

Let's also not forget about the consistent police brutality against transgender people. To put it bluntly, transgender people are in danger when they shouldn't be. Now, this is about to dive deep into class consciousness and how transphobia is fueled by the top 1%, and how that said 1% divides us and makes us go after one another. I wish to prove I am not a hypocrite. Many people will see my previous statements regarding conservatism and conservatives in general and take it as me "giving in" to the demands of the top 1% who wish to divide us. But no, that is far from the truth. While yes conservative citizens are just citizens and at most should be reeducated or charged with hate speech, at the end of the day they're just citizens who follow and align themselves with the conservative party. Do I like them? No. They are incredibly bigoted and willfully ignorant and uneducated, and they serve the party which is not only the most "anti-communist", but also the party run by the top 1%. They are a part of the problem. Calling them out is not social division, it is just plainly stating the facts. Yelling at conservatives online doesn't make me "apart" of the problem, it makes me someone who is yelling at the problem. There is a big difference between the two. I myself want to make something clear, I am not asking for a full on communist state, socialist state, or capitalist state, and I never will. Idealism waters the plant of fascism. Too much of anything kills you. Too many cigarettes, too much food, too much alcohol, too much water, too much oxygen. It all kills you, just in different ways. A mixed economy is needed for humanity to thrive, but it's clear that capitalist countries such as the United States needs to incorporate more communist, but especially more socialist policies if it is to continue having the ability to stand up for itself. An empire can't have citizens to rule over if it doesn't have anyone alive living within it. Many of the world's best aspects come from socialist and communist ideals, such as public schools, universal healthcare, public transportation, public libraries, and more such as the right to bear arms. That's more of a communist ideal/trait though.. This leads into my next topic of discussion. What exactly needs to change?

CHAPTER 2 : CHANGE ;What Must Be Done?

To make the world a better place, we must focus on the younger generation and their education. First, 2 new subjects must be introduced, politics and queer history. I'm not saying both need to be required or mandatory, but politics class must be at least. The amount of political ignorance and incompetence found within Gen Z, Millennials, and Baby Boomers is insane. We need to educate Gen Alpha before it's too late. They need to know what communism, socialism, capitalism, tariffs, fascism, and how they all connect to one another. People also must be taught that yes, you do have freedom of speech. But, there will always be consequences to your speech. Your words MATTER. They must be taught that they can say whatever they want, but if they say something bad there will be negative consequences, not positive ones. I can't speak too heavily on left leaning blue states, but in my home state of Oklahoma most of the youth and adults think you can just say whatever the hell you want without consequence. And when they face the consequences, they state that cancel culture has come for them. Utter stupidity. The reason as to why queer history should be explored within both core history classes AND as its own elective class is because most people do not understand the true history of queer people, or the impact they've had on history. Even most people who consider themselves to not be homophobic believe that bigotry comes in the form of nothing more than slurs and discrimination, despite the topic of the bigotry we face being a much larger nuanced problem. Adults, but especially children need to know that many of the people who gave them the world they have now were built by queer people. Some of the best and oldest books ever written were made by queer writers. Frida Kahlo, Marsha P. Johnson, Alan Turing, Shakespeare, and Christine Jorgensen are some of the most important queer people in history. What must also be taught is transgender people have existed since AT LEAST the times of the Native Americans. Alongside this, we must teach students the truth about gender. While yes, there are 2 primary groups of humans; ones with XY chromosomes, and ones with XX chromosomes. But, the idea of "what makes these male or female" is far from scientific. All these chromosomes do is set the traits they have. They do not decide what is male or female. In an alternate reality, the words are reversed. We also need to teach children that, yes intersex people exist and that they are real. There IS more than 2 genders and there always has been. These are not feelings, these are facts that need to be taught in a classroom setting.

Healthcare is a touchy subject, despite how easily universal health care would not only benefit the lives of billions of American citizens, but also benefit the economy. Obviously, universal health care means that citizens would not only no longer need to pay for medical expenses and could use their money on other things such as gas and food. But also, if they seek “unnecessary” medical attention, they could always go through a private clinic. This will also help the economy grow because hundreds upon thousands of new government jobs would open up, and thousands of people with their licenses who do not wish to work for the government will open up their own private clinics. Everyone EXCEPT insurance companies benefit from universal healthcare. Insurance companies and their investors will be forced into putting profits into other businesses if they wish to keep making money, therefore growing other parts of the economy.

Why am I bringing up healthcare into a paper about transgender acceptance and capitalism? Simple. Capitalism and Private Healthcare are intensely linked together. Practically glued to one another. Capitalism is one of the major enemies of the transgender community, and private healthcare is either our savior, or usually our murderer. First off, you need to find a clinic who will even give you HRT. They have the legal right to just say no to it, they don’t HAVE to prescribe you anything. It’s even harder when your insurance doesn't cover it. Insurance companies can prevent your ability to transition in the most financially stable way possible. They can take it away at will, lower your doses, give you the wrong method of taking HRT, and they can also just say no to paying for or helping out with surgeries. Insurance and the idea of private healthcare being the only healthcare available. Also, healthcare companies have done very little to show support for their transgender clients. None have made any responses saying how HRT really works and what it is. All they do is sit back and watch their clients be killed on the streets. Sometimes they’ll even limit what transitional meds they cover if enough fascists complain! Universal isn't a request by the way, I'm demanding it. Private Healthcare killed my aunt and I will never forgive the system for what it did to her. Now, this does raise the question of how do we manage to deliver HRT to transgender people under a universal healthcare system?

As many as you may know, whilst under universal healthcare it is quite difficult to get on HRT for free due to how long the waiting lines are. The United Kingdom is a good example of this issue. The solution is also simple. Just remove the application process. The idea of having to “prove” you are “trans enough” is not only absurd, but a waste of time. This stupid process doesn't just kill trans people but it also makes DIY HRT so desirable to people living within the UK and other countries where it’s “hard to get” through a provider. Places like the UK can’t get upset at how many of its citizen’s use the DIY method when they make it incredibly difficult to start HRT without tons of monthly money. The governments can not have their cake and eat it too with this process, if they remove this process then they can. But until then, they can not and never will. This process is actually based on the theories and studies of one Ray Blanchard, a complete and total moron who should have never been taken seriously as a straight, heterosexual, cisgendered white man. Any study done by someone with those characteristics on transgender people usually shouldn’t be trusted, especially theories with the intentions of making us look like predators. He tried to convince trans people that they were AGP for having self confidence.

To fix the issues of unfair pay and treatment in the workplace, we'll need 3 things to happen. First, we must inform the public that a good chunk of their technology and way of modern life is run by and managed by queer people. Not just transgender people, but queer people as a whole. That’ll definitely change the perception of queer people in their favor, making them look better for both Gen Z and up to date older folks. We must strengthen and have governments fund unions, giving them more money and the workers more rights. And lastly, we must ACTUALLY strengthen HR policies and rules to protect queer people, we need to do their jobs and protect queer people. Another thing we need to do to also protect trans people in the workplace, but also just in general is tighten discrimination and hate crime laws. Purposely misgendering and threatening transgender people with their job MUST be considered discrimination. Going out of your way to disrespect and hurt someone purely because you don’t like what sex, race, or gender they are IS discrimination. The murrder of a trans person MUST be considered a hate crime if done by a conservative. It can’t be left that way forever, but until we as a society become more kind in the ways we treat transgender folk, we must have it that way for now. Alongside this, we must also defund and put the police on a tight leash.

Violence caused by the police towards minorities is a tale as old as time. It isn't something that needs to be examined on how it affects transgender people, because it's obvious how it does. The federal government shouldn't fund the police because the police are only put in place to hurt those who oppose the rich. They are in place to protect the rich and rich only, and that can be seen with their day to day incompetence when it comes to the needs of the people, yet their strong ability to protect the needs of Nazis, billionaires, rapists, and more. State funding makes sense, but even then said funding needs to be cut in more than half. Everything the police use can be bought at a pawn shop for less than they spend. They quite literally make money based on how many tickets an officer gives out, they make money purely by STEALING money from others. Many of you might be asking who will protect us and how if there are no police? Well for starters, the police don't protect us and they never have or will. A grown man with a revolver is scared of a child with a pistol and limited ammo. Second, who will protect us? We will. The American people have access to knives and firearms and they probably always will. Even if we lose access to guns, then we have both our hands, our knives, and our community to protect us. The transgender community has protected everyone within it for a long time. The police are useless. The police need to be defunded and reformed immensely. While on the topic of government funding, the government needs changes as well and so must criminal justice. In America, you can be rejected from work if you are a convicted felon, yet you can run for president as both a nazi and felon. This is clearly a humongous issue that needs to be addressed. To put it simply, if you share traits with nazi beliefs then you shouldn't be allowed to run for president or run in any form of government. Nazis do not belong in any place in which they have power. Also, church must be entirely divided from the state. God has no place in the government, because the belief in god is constantly used as a weapon to oppress. If we are to judge someone based on their criminal record, then we should also do so based on politics. A Nazi should be flagged as one, and turned away from work same as a murrder or felon who has committed a hate crime. If we wish to judge someone who stole food for their family to eat, then we must judge someone based on their stance on Nazis. It's just plain simple.

You might have realized that a lot of these issues don't solely affect transgender people, but people as a whole. Most sane people quite dislike Nazis and not being able to afford healthcare. Yet, nobody but transgender people are willing to stand up for their beliefs half the time. So many men, women, nonbinary people, and children refuse to state facts and stand up for the right thing. They stay silent, content with their situation because they don't believe they can change anything, that nothing they do matters in the “land of the free”.

“Before revolution happens, it is perceived as being impossible; after it happens, it is seen as having been inevitable.” -Rosa Luxemberg.

The people believe they have no freedom or ability to change anything, and that feeling will soon be the thing that brings an end to us all. Life reflects art, and art has taught us this lesson many times.

Chapter 3 : The boys they groom.

Boys are better than girls. You've probably heard that before, probably when you were a kid. We're taught that this is a harmless statement, just a silly thing kids think. However, that is far from the truth. It is a dangerous mindset that has negative effects on the development of young men. A majority of men voted for Donald J. Trump in the 2024 election season. A majority of men not just voted for a racist, sexual predator, but they also voted for a well known misogynist. This isn't because men are objectively stupid or something like that, it's because from birth society as a whole tries to groom men into following the status quo, a status quo which continues to put down women and queer folks. Society tries to force them into a box, one that forces them to act tough and strong. This is called, "masculinity." Masculinity is taught as something only men can have, and if they don't have it they're an embarrassment. You're either a strong man, or not a man at all. There are good men out, good men who teach their children that masculinity is a choice and that it isn't as simple as "being tough."

Masculinity in theory isn't all that bad, there's tons of masculine queer folks and women who are good people. It's just that when it comes to men, masculinity is used as a tool. One for hate, violence, and abuse. And it isn't just used to abuse queer people and women too, it's used to also abuse men, young men, and children. For starters, masculinity is used to judge and abuse queer folks. A gay man isn't a real man, a trans man isn't a real man, and a trans woman isn't a real woman and is an abomination to masculinity. All stuff you've heard and seen before. For women, it's just as bad. Men are the majority that enforced misogynistic and sexist policies after all. But how it affects men is just as bad I'd say. Plenty of men kill themselves because of how they were raised. Plenty of young boys have been sexually abused in their life, whether it be by a man or by woman. They're taught to take it, because authority is not to be questioned. They're taught to not speak up about it, because it's embarrassing. It makes them look weak in the eyes of masculinity. The tint that overshadows their life becomes a blanket on fire, one that harms them, burns them. It's painful, I know it is. Growing up around a failing father with a broken sense of masculinity, I know what it feels like to be abused and forced into the box. I was always told I wasn't man enough, and therefore wasn't enough. I liked stupid girly things like Steven Universe and Disney movies. All things that have no gender binary, yet I was expected to dislike. Obviously, a lot of that stuff has nothing to do with transition in the slightest. I transitioned because I suffer from gender dysphoria.

It’s been there since I was a kid, that’s a cold hard fact. I had always been girly. But, I will also admit that my father’s forceful attempts to make me masculine did nothing but make it worse for me. There are billions of both cis and trans kids who suffer from toxic masculinity the same way I did as a kid, and many of which have it carry into adulthood. This leads to them becoming the very abusers who abused them. It’s an awful cycle of violence, and it contributes to both domestic abuse and rape statistics. There are 2 solutions to this, One being easier than the other. The easiest one is that we just deconstruct gender norms as a whole and give up on the idea of ‘gender.”

We accept the fact that all our genders are bodies, and bodies can be altered with little to no effort. There is no such thing as masculinity, femininity, and it’s all a construct created by the poor social system our ancestors invented to chain down and imprison people. But, sadly I doubt this would be possible. In this world, for some people, their chains are all they have. They have nothing besides it. So the second choice and hardest one, would just be to correct any worrisome behaviour we see by masculinity. Sadly, there is no middle ground for this situation and it is much more difficult than it sounds, which already sounds pretty darn difficult. Maybe every child should be given a therapist to discuss this with as a young teen.

Chapter 4 : A grim future.

The year is 3075, the Earth is dead. All that remains is a flooded rock with few islands covered in both trash and water. The human race has moved from its planet to conquering the stars. Where you live and how you live among the stars is based on the class of which you are born into. The poor do nothing but work all day, chained down practically, living in dark rooms. They're told that the mining they're doing is necessary for the ship to run, and that if they keep up the good work, someday they may end up at the highest rank. Little do the poor know, that is impossible. The middle class has it easier, but still difficult. They don't work as hard, but they work just as much. They don't really have the ability to reproduce. How can you have relationships if you're too busy working? Then that leaves the rich, the top 1% . Time has passed enough to where one person can now live forever, the rich live forever. They populate the ship with working, using their old children, using women as tools. They sit up at the very stop, gazing at the stars, watching its beauty, contemplating how to use them to make more money.

If this continues, we as a people are doomed. This is the world we will be given. In the future, the planet will be dead, and we'll be exploring the stars. But we won't be exploring the stars, the RICH WILL. Our great grandchildren will be put in chains and forced to work to exist, being taught that it's right. They'll be worked to death, just to yearn for a retirement they'll never have. People like Elon, Trump, Zuckerburg, and Bezos will be staring at the stars, surrounded by probably underage girls, while we will be sleeping in a dark room after a long day of working in the mines. Our children won't be able to experience what it's like to earn an honest day of work, they won't be able to experience drinking fresh water, breathing fresh air. They won't be able to experience feeling the grass on their feet, they won't get to experience what it's like to live on Earth. The rich are making transgender people the enemy to distract you from them, the real enemy. They're killing the planet so they can someday work us and the future generations to death. All for just a little more profit. As I've explained in this project, the ruling class has gone out of its way to use its influence to convince the American people that transgender people and ideology is the real enemy of freedom to convince the people of the U.S., to attack and kill us. They have cut us at our knees before we could climb, and they have weaponized the people's fears and hatred to kill us. All this, so they can kill off the planet and someday imprison the lower-class citizens and work them as slaves, convincing us and the people on top that it's "hard paid work". Marx would burst into tears knowing that capitalism has grown so much out of our control that the sympathy HE HIMSELF had for the rich no longer exists. So to the conservatives and general transphobes reading, please change your ways. You are going to kill us, and then eventually yourselves.

"The human race will probably come to an end some time, and new species may rule over this planet. Earth may not be forever, but we still have the responsibility to leave what traces of life we can. Building the future and keeping the past alive are one and the same thing."
